About Glen

NOTE: If you are logged in you can edit your vcard info, such as your email address, by simply clicking on the text.

Hello, and welcome to my profile. I work as a content writer, but in my spare time I research and develop projects which I believe will give people more control over their lives, whether it be more control over their data, more control over the content on the internet, or more control over their country or community.

I am from South West England, although i'm currently quarantined in the north of France.

This text is from my Vcard note. The text below is from about.html. Below is an example of a DVO widget:

<http://donateEth@0415b7a73c9f6284eb71fde1942fd4c9a3204242c9b9b8d55d60.dvo>

This is my about page. When you log into DVO, a file called about.html will be created in a folder called DVO, along with two other folders. One is for posts, like the ones below, and the other is for comments. The comments folder is for the DVO chrome extension. The DVO extension allows you to like, dislike and comment on any URL. It uses GunDB to aggregate the comments from other users. GunDB is a distributed database, written entirely in JavaScript. By default, data is stored in localStorage, and is replicated to other peers who are using your application. It uses a sophisticated conflict resolution algorithm to achieve eventual consistency, and the syntax is similar to Firebase.

Hello Glen. This is my first comment! The comment ID is stored in the localStorage and replicated to other peers who have the extension installed. However, the comment itself is stored as a html file in the commenter's POD.

Welcome to the prototype of Devolution, or 'Devo' for short. Devo is an open-source decentralised governance model. Any money that goes into Devo is redistributed in the form of Social Credits. You can use these credits to finance various activities on the platform. As you can see, it has sections for voting, financing public services, sitting/building courses, job search, collectively buying/renting land/houses, and basically anything else we need to govern ourselves.
